

Relationship #2

The cow eats grass. The cow benefits directly from this relationship by securing a food source. The individual consumed grass plant gains no direct benefit from this relationship. Grazing can stimulate new grass growth, and the feces of the cow can serve to provide nutrients for grass growth.