

Relationship #13

The hermit crab is less likely to be eaten by cuttlefish or other predator when an anemone rides on its shell. The anemone gains access to a wider feeding range and the hermit crab gains the protection of the anemone's stinging tentacles. Both organisms benefit from this relationship.