

Relationship #7

The osprey or fish-hawk hunts, catches and eats fish. The osprey and its young offspring benefit directly from this relationship by securing a food source. The individual prey animals gain no benefit from this relationship. The prey organism is killed in this relationship. This relationship does have an impact on the physical and behavioral adaptations of the remaining prey population descendents.